Suntour has lined-up various suspension fork models for 27.5 inch mountain bicycles, having such a wide array that it covers all quality levels, from entry-level to top-end. In the entry-level category, the XCT 27.5 is present on many bicycle models prepared for this year, so it's a good reason to take a closer look at it. As far as construction is concerned, the new model relies on the same „recipe” as previous ones. The lower arms have been carefully crafted, keeping the spot on the brace designed for installing a light or a fender, while the stanchions are 30mm thick and the crown looks nice. However, the screws at the bottom of the fork leave to be desired giving the impression of a cheap product, and so does every bit of plastic present on the fork, especially the lock-out and preload levers. However, despite their appearance, the two levers actuate two fully functional mechanisms, which, we must admit, represents a breakthrough for Suntour forks belonging to this level. So, the preload and lock-out functions really work, and the fact that they're reliable may probably be the best piece of news regarding the 27.5 XCT. On the other hand, old habits die hard, and the coils lack sensitivity. They are much too hard, and for my 68 kilos of body weight (150 lbs.), I didn't notice any smoothness when crossing over obstacles. Neither did I feel too much actual shock absorbtion. Not only do the hard coils cause a bumpy and uncomfortable ride, but this, in turn, takes its toll on the overall performances of the bicycle. For example, you simply can't expect form the XCT the front wheel to stick to the ground. Further more, the rebound is simply to raw and brutal, and in tough situations it just causes the front part of the bike to be thrown very high up. Maybe the fork wasn't designed for riding in actual mountain biking conditions, but you have to have the proper expectations from it. The list of drawbacks gest rounded-up by the annoying noise that appears when the fork rebounds, that makes you start asking yourself questions related to the quality of it. It's also true that the lock-out lever gives the impression of a rusty old button, but at least it works properly. Suntour XCT remains the same unimpressive fork we've known for years and years. The manufacturer did provide it with a nicer visual design this time, but neither weight, nor functionality have been improved. However, if you're stuck in the entry-level category, you can always turn to Suntour's XCR or the Rock Shox XC 32. The XCT is better off being ridden in the park. Weight: 2,740 kg (4,4 lbs) Page 2 Welcome to AliExpress! Welcome back Sign Out Register Sign in There is no 'XCC'. Possibly you mean XCT, XCE or XCR. XCR lacks slider sleeves, and IME doesn't need much maintenance. If you are referring to XCT or XCE, they are constructed the same but XCE has 28mm stanchions and current XCT has 30mm. The disassembly visible there is of an old XCM fork without cartridge damper. There is a difference between 'XCM' and 'XCM HLO'; the former is a specific model, but 'XCM fork' could refer to an 'XCM' or an 'XCM HLO', where the former likely contains two springs as shown there, whereas XCM HLO will contain a spring and a sealed-for-life cartridge damper. This is an XCM service kit ($30); FEE785 Slider Sleeve FAA070-10 Wipers KCE212 Conpanna fork grease FAA122 Spanner Wrench FSN023 Fixing Nuts these parts are sold separately $2 for the wrench $15 for the wipers (pair) $9 for the slider sleeves $3 for the nuts The service interval is annually/100 hours. On an XCR fork you still have the wipers, but no slider sleeves. If you refer to the service manual 20manuals/General_Fork_Manual/En_MY21_SUS_fork_user_manual.pdf "Check function of fork / check torques of mountings screws and nuts on bottom of lowers (suggested tightening torque: bolt: 10Nm, nut: 8Nm) / check for scratches, dents, cracks, discoloration, signs of wear and signs of minor corrosion (maintain with oily cloth), or oil leaks." - every 50 hours plus every 100 hours the same plus "disassembly / cleaning the entire fork inside and out / cleaning and lubricating dust seals and slider sleeves / checking torques / adjusting to the riders liking. Before disassembly, check the slider sleeve play of the fork. To do so, apply the front wheel brake and gently push the bicycle back and forth at the handlebar stem shaft. Replace the slider sleeves if the play is excessive (more than 1 mm at the fork brace)." In other words the slider sleeves are intended to be a service item, but you don't need the service kit - you do need tools and grease, and you WILL need to replace the slider sleeves (which are absent from XCR), but NOT every service. This is not a car and you are not replacing parts on a fixed interval, only lubing/inspecting on a fixed interval. The cost of a service as shown in the video is a one-off purchase of tools and some grease. There are lots of brands of fork grease, some grease is too thick - it should liquify in use under heat. SR Suntour's own grease is called Conpanna and is $4 for 20g. Possibly if you are stripping forks often you could buy a larger quantity more cheaply. So you are looking at $6 for tools/grease and then if you had a 'slider sleeve' type fork you'd want to have those on hand because nobody wants to take a fork apart and see that you don't have the part. The wipers will perish at some point and would need replacing after several years but probably you'd not buy those right away. With regards to the nuts, correctly torquing the nuts is important to stop the fork falling apart, but you wouldn't need to replace them often. As far as the internals go, there is a LO damper cartridge; this is priced at $40. This cartridge has rebound damping and is better than other types such as HLO, or cartridgeless models. However it's also $40, which is not far off the value of an XCM fork. In the US SR Suntour has a trade-in program which might be cheaper than buying a fork there. Here in Indonesia, a new SR Suntour Epixon fork is priced under $200 so perhaps those trade-in prices aren't that great. But anyway, $200 is roughly the price of a new fork which would be much better in that it would have air spring (adjustable for any bodyweight, unlike springs), a better quality damper, lighter weight (the Epixon is 1.7kg or so, certain XCM models are over 3.4kg), and wider, lighter (alloy rather than steel) stanchions. That's to say that you would not service your cheap XC2 fork in a developed country at a dealer because the labour cost would exceed the fork cost, so you'd likely just leave the fork till it failed and then replace it with a more expensive one, or even a new bike. Here in Indonesia labour would run around $3, so it would make sense, as does DIY, but essentially you are not going to do much with this fork beyond strip it, lube it, replace perished seals/sliders every few years, and eventually recycle it (nice lump of steel, weigh it in). A typical service might cost you 50 cents in grease, and then if you need to replace seals maybe $20. This is still much cheaper than any replacement, so it does make sense to service it if your labour is cheap.
